The staff stated he would look in the written shift exchange nursing documentation for information on residents. The staff stated he was notified by the prior shift nurse that the Resident #14 was using the EZ Stand for all transfers at the time of the scheduled shift on 5/29/25. Staff T acknowledged there was more bruising on the resident on 5/29, but did not document the additional bruises since a skin assessment had been completed after the fall. On 6/12/25 at 10:53 AM the Director of Nursing (DON), stated if the physician indicated to obtain an X-ray if needed, it should have been documented on the nurses written shift exchange for all nurses to know. The DON acknowledged if there had been a change in pain level as indicated on the MAR-TAR a call should have been made to the physician for further assessment of the resident's pain. The staff stated the increase in bruising should have had a root cause analysis initiated as to the cause, especially if it was not noted on the skin assessment after the fall. The DON stated with the resident having plans for transitioning to hospice services on 6/2/25 the facility was trying to navigate the "gray area". The staff did acknowledge that the plan for transition to hospice services should not change how a resident was treated.	F 684

The heel was noted to be dressing w/ a bordered gauze, completely saturated, and the heel was resting on the baseboard of his bed without a Prevalon boot on - Prevalon boot present on L foot, however. It would be advisable to remove the baseboard, if possible, unless this causes patient unsafe positioning in bed. The wound was tender, though not acutely as he does have notable neuropathy - did not feel any of the monofilament testing today. There is necrotic tissue in the wound base, debrided away today, will most likely need weekly debridement's. He is diabetic with neuropathy so this is a multifactorial wound, though do believe that pressure was the primary cause of the wound as observed today to have a point of pressure directly over the wound. D/t large amount of drainage, apply calcium alginate only over open wound bed not in periwound, and change EOD. This will allow moisture control while still facilitating autolytic debridement of wound face. He also has uncontrolled 2-3+ edema in his BLE w/ no compression - start ACE wraps apply daily from toe to knee bilaterally. His coccyx was too tender to be debrided today, ordered topical Lidocaine to be applied prior to my next visit, to allow him to tolerate a sharp debridement - see orders tab. For now, order TRIAD (see orders tab), to protect and facilitate autolytic debridement in the meantime. See specific application instructions in the specific wound orders. Ensure offloading measures are in place - regular turns to offload the coccyx, floating his heels, keeping the R foot in Prevalon boot at all times. He should bear weight on this foot as little as possible, and should be assisted while up to accomplish this. Continue to follow weekly - anticipate debridement's on both wounds next	F 686

F 686	Continued From page 34 week. Document described pressure ulcer as unstageable due to slough and/or eschar obscuring the base of the wound.  Review of Resident #61's EHR dated 6/9/25 titled, Progress Note from visiting wound care service completed by Staff AA, NP from visiting wound care service documented Resident #61 was observed in bed that day, rounded with the ADON. Resident #61 denied pain at either wound site that day. Resident #61's bilateral lower extremities were appropriately in Prevalon boots. Resident #61's right heel wound was noted to be too dry throughout last week, so ADON reached out to me and I gave her OK to use Hydrogel as Santyl was not in yet. That day the wound remained too dry with only a small amount of serious drainage on the dressing. The wound was nearly completely covered with dry, unstable eschar and nearly dry slough. It is ringed with epithelial tissue and some minimal granular tissue can be noted peppered throughout the wound bed. The wound was effectively debrided, removing all slough & eschar, revealing underlying adipose tissue, though no other underlying structures are identified post debridement. As such, we can diagnose this as a stage three pressure ulcer. Santyl was present today, so this was applied to the wound and it was properly dressed and replaced in a Prevalon boot. Ordered arterial ultrasound studies with ABI's as Resident #61 had multiple risk factors for arterial disease, a very slow healing ulcer that remains full of necrotic tissue week to week, and has need for compression. Need to identify the level of arterial disease, if any, before deciding on the appropriate level of compression. He has tolerated Ace wraps OK so will order edema wear stockings to be applied for this week as the	F 686
